

My Hiking Blog

The purpose of this document is to define day hiking in Boundary County by listing the documents I use to describe Boundary County Views. This blog will give an overview from which you can drill down to those documents. This document is a work in progress that will probably never be complete because there are so many views and hikes. It began by using Google Earth to take pictures of the many views created by the fact that several mountain ranges come together in Bonners Ferry. I did this work before I ever took my first hike. Then as I began hiking I began collecting information available about those hikes on the internet. This type information is constantly improving. The objective here is to be prepared for the hike so when we get there we will know where we are and at what we are looking. Look at my Myrtle Peak Day Hike document for example, and then browse through Day Hikes, Visual Tours, Trailheads, and Boundary County Views to see how I plan to pull these together into many more day hikes. Please feel free to help me out if you like.

Boundary County Views

Visual Tours

Trailheads

Boundary County Measurement

Day Hikes